The New Sober Space

Loosid Is The New Digital Platform That Celebrates Sobriety

From travel to dating, parties and other events,
Loosid helps provide a safe place where alcohol and drugs are not part of the experience.

An App Is Born

A BIT OF OUR HISTORY

Loosid was born in the mind of co-founder and CEO, MJ Gottlieb, after years of battling addiction to drugs and alcohol. Once he finally achieved sobriety, the real struggle began - how to maintain his sobriety in a world where sobriety is often seen as boring and the end of fun.

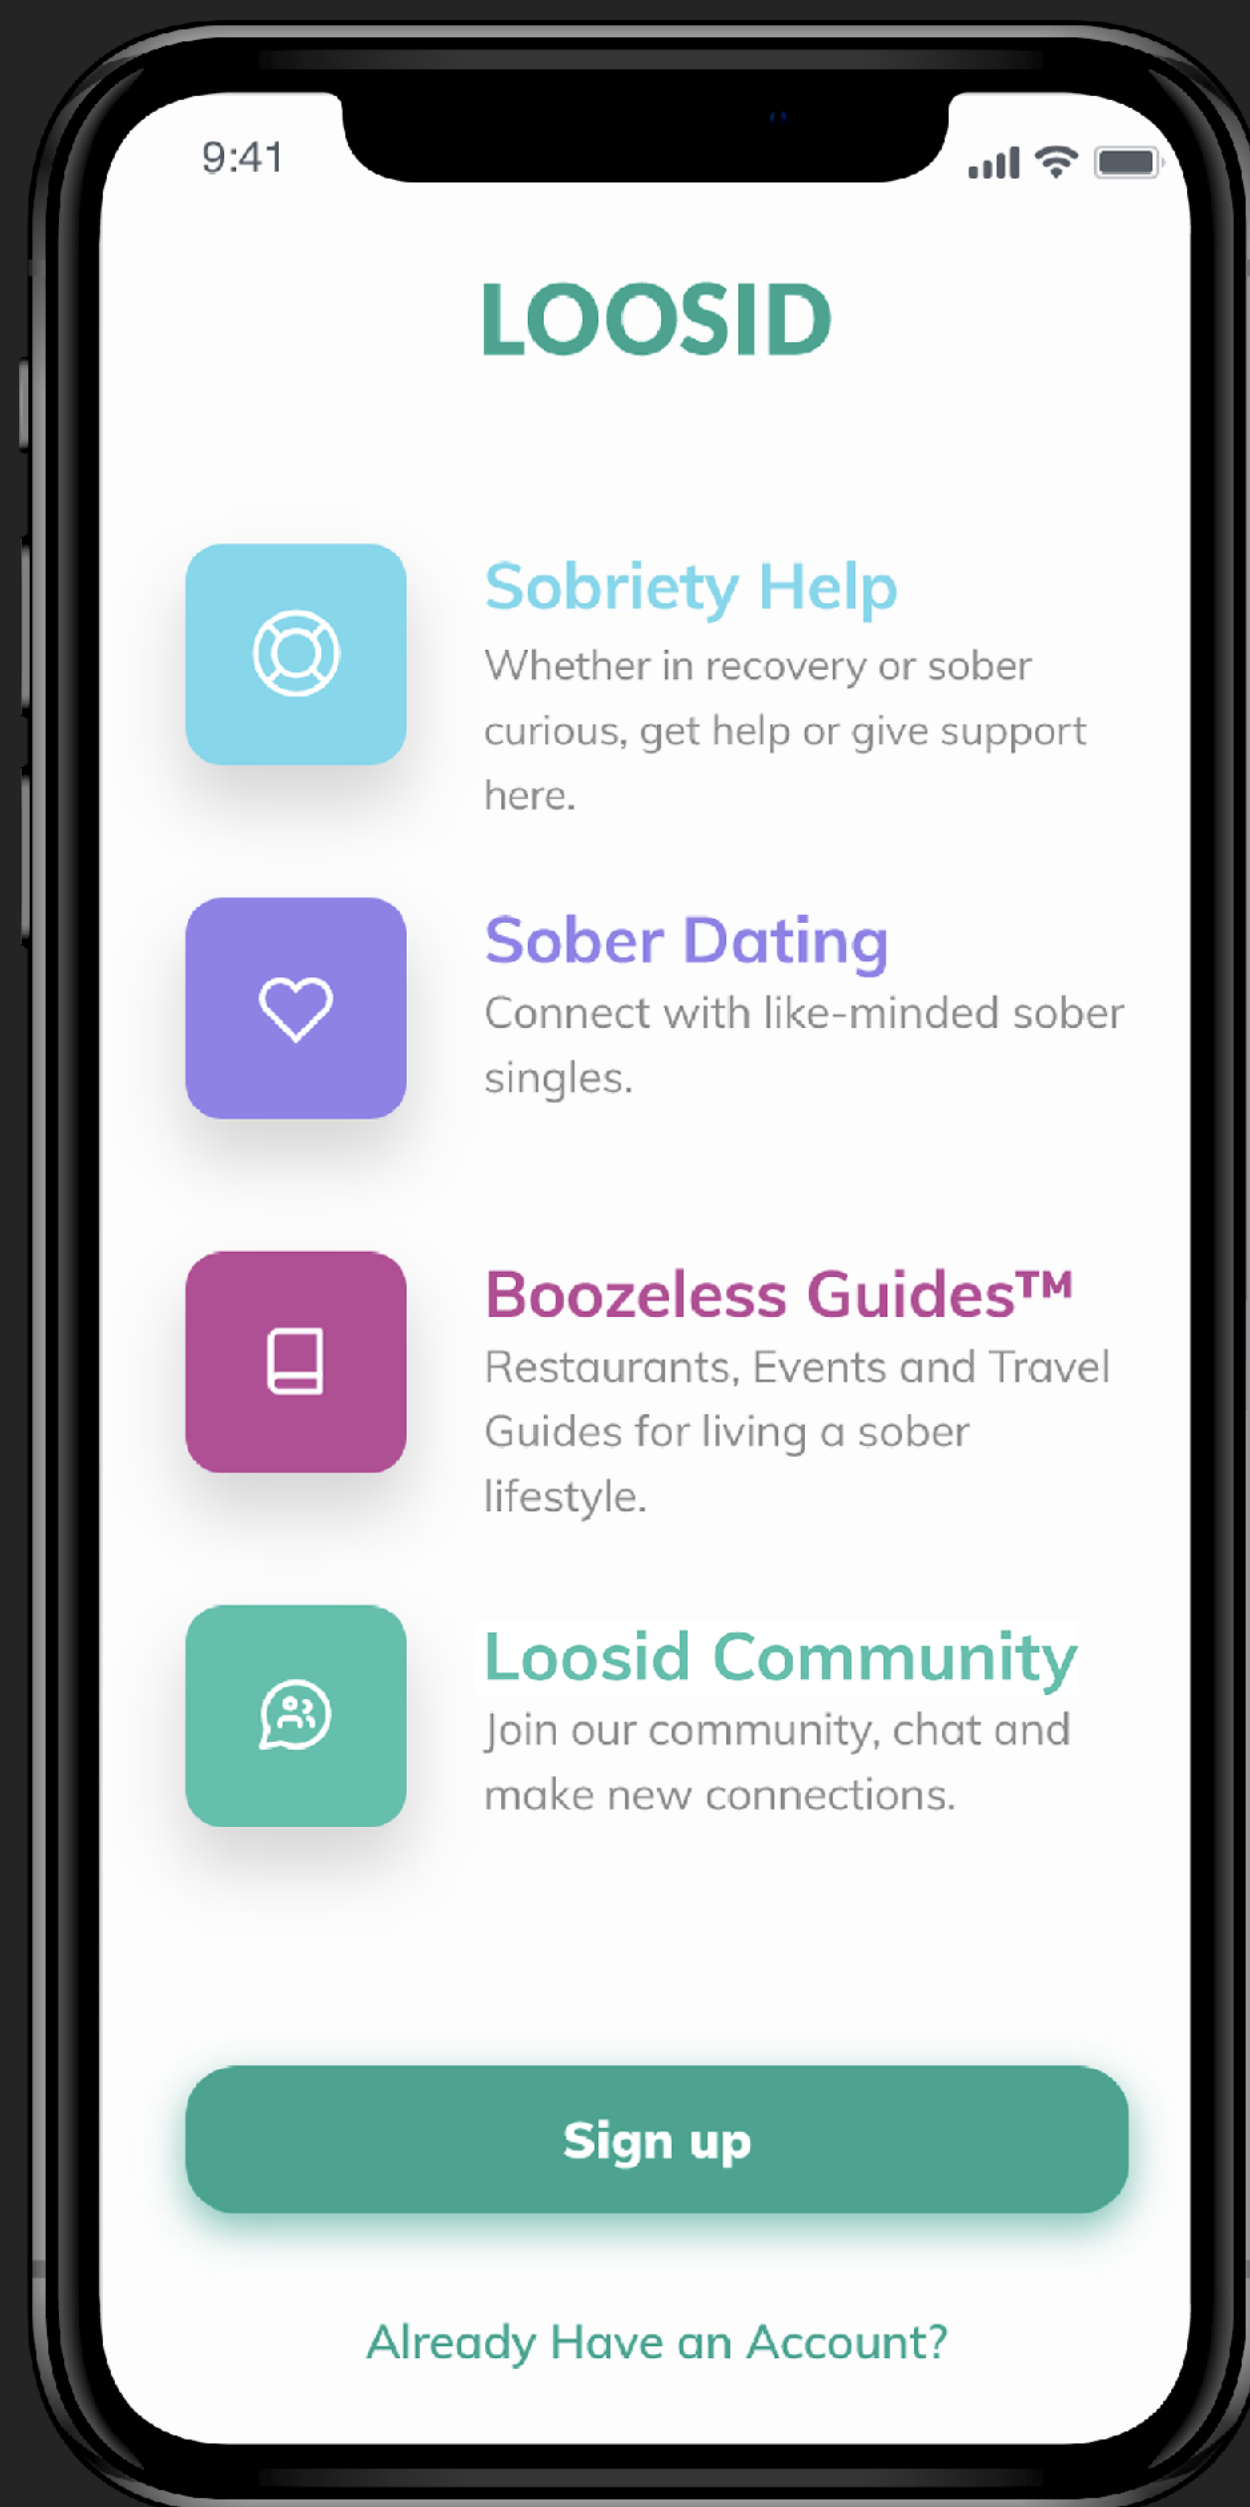

These are some of the biggest challenges faced when living sober. Where do you eat, drink, and hang out with friends who are like-minded and share your same lifestyle? These challenges are amplified when you're trying to date or participate in events that are not sober-related. Events and social situations where alcohol is the norm can be extremely uncomfortable and in some cases act as a trigger for those in recovery.

of fun, it’s only the beginning.”

FINDING LOVE IN ALL THE RIGHT PLACES

73 percent of daters who are regular drinkers prefer going out for drinks on a first date—46 percent because it's easy and less formal, and 27 percent because it's a good way to calm your social jitters and have a conversation, according to research released by dating app Zoosk.

Dating on the Loosid platform is easy - users 17 and older can download the app and register. Then, like most of the other dating apps available, users can swipe and match with other Loosid users available in your area. You can search profiles of other sober singles in your area, too.

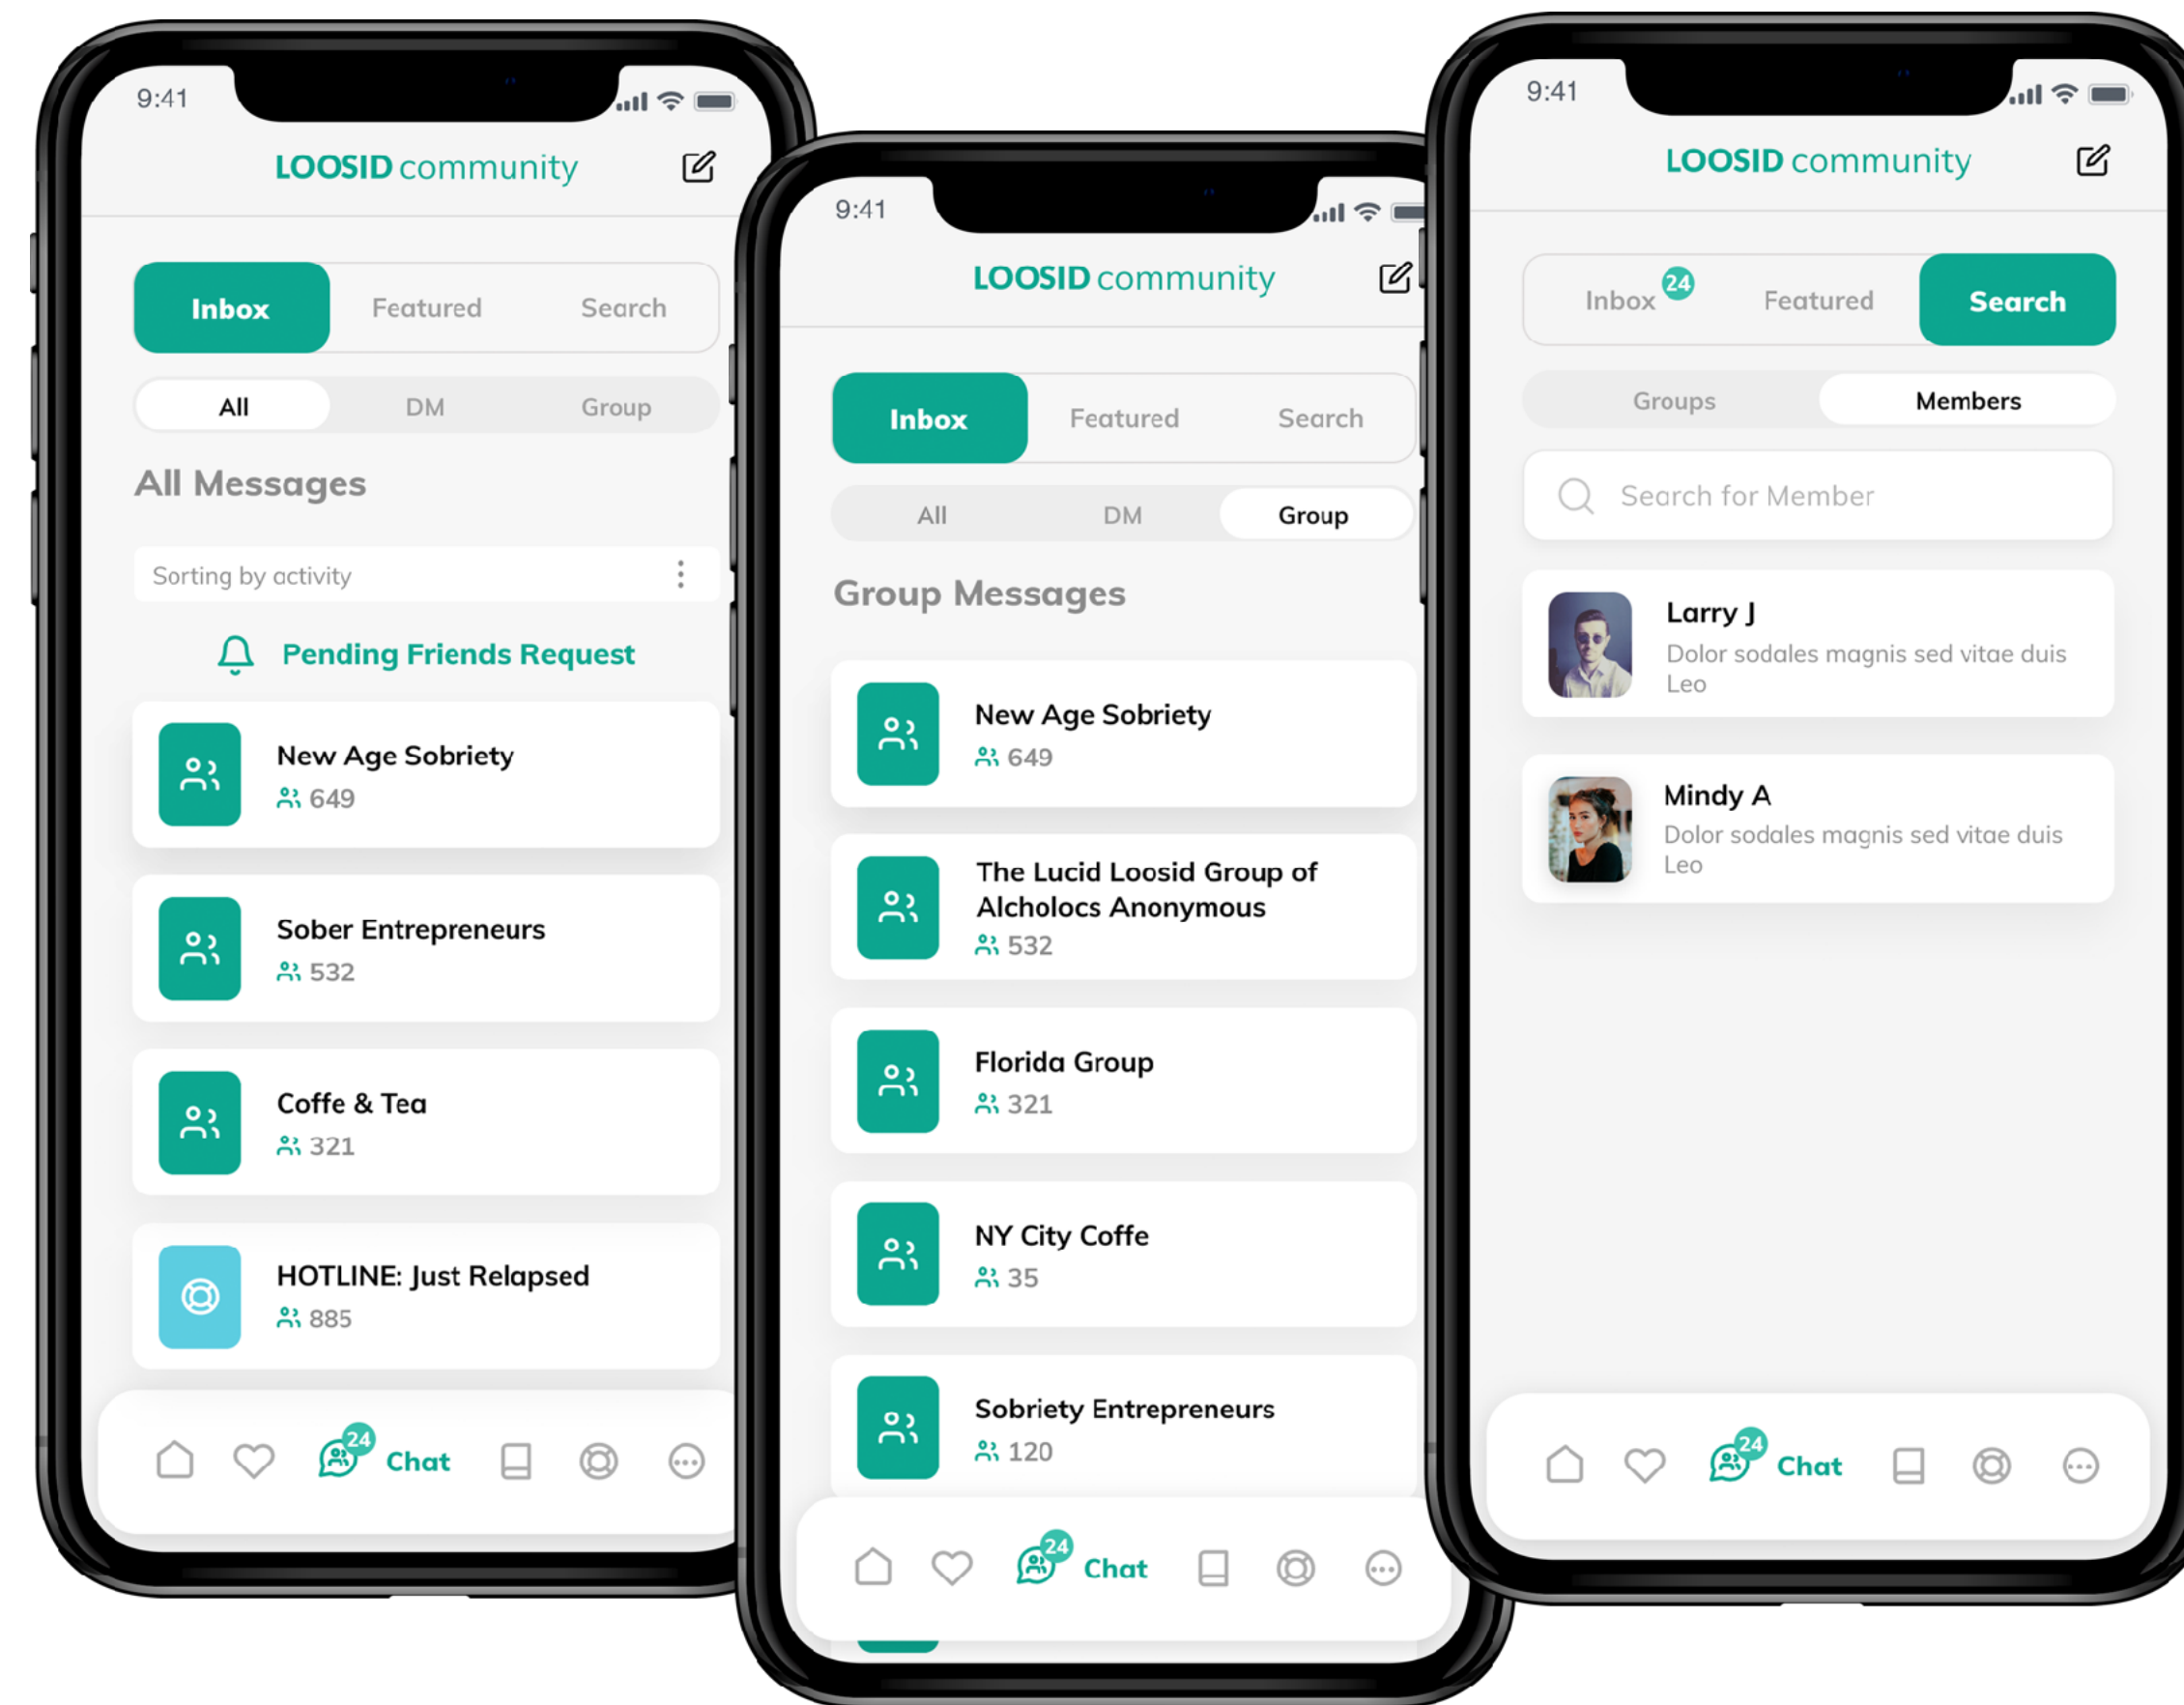

Even if you're not in the market for dating, Loosid could still be a useful app to have. If you aren't looking for a romantic connection, you can disable the dating feature, leaving the other Loosid features available. Loosid provides tons of information for people who want to travel or make friends at sober events and activities, whether at a cooking class, yoga or even sporting events.

PURPOSE IN DESIGN

A SOCIAL GOOD APP

An opioid epidemic spreads across the rural and metropolitan U.S., destroying families and killing loved ones. Every day beloved celebrities and entertainers lose their battles with addiction, proving that no matter how successful we are, we still need the support of a strong sober community to succeed.

Loosid continues to provide free tools to help those struggling with addiction. It's our obligation and duty to give those fighting to maintain their sobriety every chance they can get.

To date, over 850,000 messages of support have been exchanged by users through the Loosid Hotline.
